Equipping Faith Communities for Suicide Prevention & Recovery

Thurs., May 3 8-11:45 a.m. Grand Meridian 2621 N. Oneida St., Appleton

Our region and our state have higherthan-average adult and youth suicide rates. How can faith leaders and faith communities restore hope, before and after a suicide?

Creating Hope, co-presented by Samaritan Counseling Center and

Women of strength helping women in need

This annual campaign raises money for our Samaritan Fund so low-income women can access the counseling they need.

For giving a gift of hope to the campaign, you're invited to a

Luncheon Keynote

Executive community and business leader

NAMI Fox Valley, will explore that question. This workshop equips faith leaders and faith communities to prevent, intervene in, and minister in the wake of suicide.

You'll learn to:

- Recognize warning signs and causes of suicide.
- Promote mental health and resiliency.
- Apply basic intervention principles.
- Train others in your faith community to intervene when someone is at risk.
- Identify resources for grief support after a suicide.
- Develop a plan to promote healing and hope as a faith community.

Register online today for only $35. Includes breakfast.

Wellness Screen Takes Part in Kids in Crisis Town Halls

Our Wellness Screen team, which partners with nine school systems to give K-12 students access to free mental health check-ups right at school, was on the go this month.

They took part in two town hall meetings presented by USA TODAY NETWORK-Wisconsin as part of its ongoing Kids in Crisis series. The first was in Appleton on March 6, and the second was in Oshkosh on March 13. Both communities are among those Wellness Screen serves.
